Voices Off, AN EQUAL FUTURE

Thursday 20 September 2018, 5pm, tickets £6
In association with Mishcon De Reya LLP

■ ■ ■ ■

Sylvia Pankhurst made pioneering contributions to votes for women, but she also fought for some of the most impoverished people in London's East End, and against imperialism, racism and fascism. Over the last 100 years since Sylvia was campaigning, there has been a momentous change in social equality across all walks of life, but can we argue that modern British society is truly equal? If not, why not? What would a truly equal future look like and is it achievable? And as we look forward to the next 100 years, what advances should be made for equality and, more importantly, how will we get there? Panellists to be announced.
